Shanghai Night is a dance party hosted by Maple Manor's top executive Attorney Marcus Evangelista. It was a party thrown for his Filipino/Asian friends and young professionals such as nurses, therapists, doctors, businessmen, engineers, administrators, etc.

The latest of the "Shanghai Night" parties was held last January 29 in the Knights of Columbus hall on Garling Drive, Dearborn. Its official purpose was to welcome the Chinese New Year in a merry, festive mood.

Indeed festive it was, and a big success too with 240 attendees. It was an upscale, vibrant, and well-organized event. It was quite a production with a gourmet dinner, open bar, free cocktails, full-service bartenders, caterers, free coat check and even security guards.

Marcus certainly knows how to energize and mobilize people. He stressed it was a not-for-profit Filipino-Asian party with the fund shortfall covered by him. He wanted to ensure that the merry-making will be long remembered by those who attended it.

And, yes, the Year of the Golden Rabbit (according to Chinese zodiac) was ushered in a jolly, cheerful ambiance, highlighted by a New Year 10-to-1 countdown, which was followed by riotous applause and restrained shouting.

After the countdown, it was back to the non-stop dancing, with the music shifting to a faster, feet-tickling tempo. The party goers with light feet were merrier and bolder than before as they did their thing in the softly-lit dance hall. They gyrated, spun, swung and pirouetted to their hearts' content.

Without question, three or four of the ladies were the lead stars in the Shanghai Night's Dance Party. They danced with a happy-go-lucky nature. These ladies did not seem to mind the freezing cold caused by the pouring snow outside as they were wearing evening dresses more appropriate for a summer party. Their attires gave them a stylish and sexy look, and they drew a lot of attention from the more amorous gentlemen.

Marcus Evangelista, who is a lawyer, takes his work seriously, but he also loves to dance and have fun. And he can really perform ballroom dances, even those with intricate steps.

Those invited by Marcus but were not able to make it, missed a truly enjoyable Shanghai Night revelry. But if they want to experience what they missed, they should see to it that they attend his next Shanghai Night's Dance Party. For event information, visit www.evangelistagroup.com.
